Let the Liar Beware Membership Office Installs Polygraph Machine

By Bud Court

You've heard that spies make the best liars? Well, it turns out that Park Slope Food Coop members make even better ones.

To combat an increase in what Membership Coordinators call "lying their asses off," the office staff proposed the installation and implementation of a lie detector test in the Membership Office. The agenda item was initially voted down by an overwhelming majority at the January General Meeting. However, after General Coordinator Ann Herpel gave an impassioned speech about blah blah blah, the membership changed its tune and approved the contentious proposal.

18% of Coop Members Are Liars

An unscientific survey showed that approximately 18% of Coop members are lying about various aspects of their memberships. What is the most common tall tale? "My husband lives in the basement and has his own refrigerator."

One of the tipoffs for Membership Coordinator Matt Hoagland came during a new member orientation where the majority of new joins were 20-somethings who did not list any house-

"It doesn't really hurt," says new member Sherry Jubilee of her experience with the Coop's new lie detector test. "But it sure is scary."

mates on their applications. "You're telling me that a 22-year-old can afford his own apartment in Brooklyn?" Hoagland griped. "I don't think so!"

"You're telling me that a 22-year-old can afford his own apartment in Brooklyn?"
Hoagland griped.
"I don't think so!"

It's not just the young who are lying, either. Coordinator Mary Gerety, who administers both the Coop's Parental Leave program and its Disability Program, says nothing shocks her anymore. Gerety recently allowed 62-year-old member Shelly Monaco [names have been changed to protect members' identities] to take a three-month break from her Maintenance shift because of severe arthritis in her left hand. "Two nights later my husband and I saw her getting down in our Hip Hop Dance Class in Fort Greene," Mary reported. "You can't do the Worm with a bum wrist!"

If the Shoe Pits Coop Debuts Sustainable Line of Footwear

By Amy Pearl

Coop shoppers in search of ethical consumer choices on the shopping floor have lots to choose from. Local apples, fair trade coffee, vegan toothpaste, reused tampons. But when it comes to footwear, the cupboard is bare. That will soon change, because the Coop is putting its feet where its mouth is and creating a line of sustainable shoes, the purchase of which helps suspended members get shopping again.

"So much of our garbage is crying out to become shoes," explained Tom Toesend, the Foot Squad Leader and founder of Kompost Kicks. Toesend got the idea for the shoes during his Food Processing shift. "A bunch of us were in the basement cutting parmesan cheese when I suddenly threw off my Crocs and attached two thick cheese rinds to my feet with twist ties! The oils massaged my skin and the bendy cheese gave a spring to my step. Soon the whole shift was wearing cheese shoes!"

Beyond Cheese Rinds

These early prototypes had to be abandoned, however. Cheese rinds are expensive and not very plentiful, nor are they vegan. With trial and error, Toesend and his newly formed Foot Squad were able to create five different shoe styles: the unisex CocoClog (crafted from coconut shells), the men's ButterFoot and women's KaboFoot (beautifully rendered from butternut squash and kabocha, respectively), the kids' AvoKiddo will be sequestered in the small conference room on the second floor. There the member will be joined by no less than four Membership Coordinators, two Receiving Coordinators (one of whom will be a heavy lifter) and an unarmed, plain-clothed police officer from the 75th precinct.

Polygraph

The member will be strapped into a chair—not too unlike an electric chair—where seven sensors will be attached to the member's fingers. The lead examiner will start with a series of questions that should not cause the member any stress, such as, "What is your member number?" "What week is your shift on?" "Do you recycle?" These questions will help establish the norms for a person's signals.

Then the real questions begin. "Did you stay for your entire shift?" "When did your divorce become final?" "Are those triplets really yours?"

During and after the test the examiner can look at the graphs and see whether the member's vital signs changed significantly on any of the questions. In general, a drastic change (such as increased breathing rate and pulse, higher blood pressure, increased perspiration, puddling) indicates that the person is lying.

The entire process will be recorded, and the most egregious cases will be shown as part of the PowerPoint presentation at new member orientations.

"I would like the Coop to create an Undercover Squad, whereby members would be expected to gather information on other members we suspect of cheating the Coop."

Punishment to Fit the Crime

Not everyone gets stressed out when they aren't telling the truth. Psychopaths and sociopaths, for example, don't exhibit those typical physiological changes when they lie. Gary Ridgway, the "Green River Killer," passed a polygraph test even though he eventually confessed to 48 murders.

So even if you pass the test, the Membership Office probably won't believe you anyway.

The consequences of failing the polygraph depend on the severity of the lie. For instance, if a member fibs about getting a divorce, he or she will be forced into an arranged "Coop marriage" with a member who is constantly suspended and ineligible for extensions. If a member is caught lying about a make-up they never did, they will then be required to work three make-ups digging ditches for the Garden Squad.

While some members are calling these new tactics draconian, one staffer (who wishes to remain anonymous due to fear of backlash) thinks we are not taking it far enough. "I would like the Coop to create an Undercover Squad, whereby members would be expected to gather information on other members we suspect of cheating the Coop." Membership Coordinator Lewanika Forde-Senghor went on to say, "I would be lying if I said I wasn't in favor of wire tapping." ■

Top Five Lies Told to the Membership Office

1. Joe Holtz is a close, personal friend of mine.
2. I don't share food with my wife and kids.
3. I don't share food with my husband and kids.
4. My kids don't eat.
5. I'm telling the truth.

NOT FOR WORKSLOT CREDIT

EXCITING WORKSLOT OPPORTUNITIES

PSYCHIC SQUAD Sundays, 4:00 p.m.

Got a sixth sense? The Coop is looking for paranormal members to join the new Psychic Squad. Skills needed include extrasensory perception, astral projection, mind control, channeling, telekinesis and scrying. The ability to levitate is a plus. If interested, please contact You-Know-Who.

INTERPRETIVE DANCE SQUAD Wednesdays, 3:30 p.m.

Do you speak the language of dance? If so, this may be the squad for you. The Coop is seeking experienced modern and interpretive dancers to manage long checkout lines, shopping boxes and "tense" situations. Email a cover letter and résumé (Mark Morris, Jennifer Muller a plus) to everybodyhurts@psfc.coop.

DENTAL SQUAD Various times

The Coop is recruiting a Dental Squad comprised of seven dentists, three oral surgeons and one hygienist. If you've got an established practice of 3+ years, this could be the squad for you! This is not an every-four-week shift. It's for FTOP credit only. Each filling or general cleaning counts as one FTOP credit. Oral surgery (e.g. extractions, implants, bridges and crowns) is worth two FTOP credits. All procedures will be performed in the second-floor meeting room. References required but a note from your mom is okay too.

CUPID'S ARROW SQUAD Saturdays, 8:30 p.m.

Love love? The Coop is looking for a few yentas to join its matchmaking squad. You should be outgoing yet discreet, know the difference between Tinder and Match.com, and have no less than three ex's you still consider to be good friends. Love is all around—your job is to spot potential "connections" while everyone is texting or playing games on their phones. Call the Membership Office if you're interested.

RAVE SQUAD Saturdays, 12 a.m. – 5:00 a.m.

Nostalgic for the warehouse daze of the mid 80s/early 90s? Help organize after-hour dance parties in the basement! Glow sticks, whistles and pacifiers will be provided. Must love deep house, trance and darkcore jungle. If interested, email pureMDMA@psfc.coop. Only members between the ages of 37 and 48 will be considered.

COOP ASTROLOGER Thursdays, 5:30 a.m.

Can you tell when Neptune will conjoin the sun and moon? How about the day of a Mercury Retrograde? If your talents reach for the stars, the Coop needs you to help plan for events, special deliveries, capital improvements and big projects. The possibility of extra work credit if the astrologer is willing to do member readings in the store once or twice a month.

Affordable Housing for Food Coop Members

By Elliman Douglas Corcoran

Mayor DiBlasio ran—and won—on a platform that heavily emphasized affordable housing. Many feel his administration has fallen short of the high expectations. So Park Slope Food Coop Co-Founder and General Manager Joe Holtz has decided to take matters into his own hands.

“I started a Food Coop and put food into the mouths of tens of thousands of New Yorkers,” Holtz modestly explained over a craft beer at The Gate. “Now watch me put a roof over their heads.”

When the parking garage two doors down from the Food Coop went on the market two years ago, Holtz was all over it. Unfortunately the winning bid went to the Toll Brothers, a luxe real estate developer known for their high-end residential towers that are popping up all over Manhattan. Their new building on Union Street will hold 114 units, ranging from one-to-four bedrooms, with prices starting at $850,000 and going up to more than $6 million.

So when another parking garage on Union Street, the one next to the former Tea Lounge space, came on the market, Holtz pounced. The deal—which was sealed only last week—was brokered

Some are disappointed that the new development will be a condominium project, not by none other than Atlantic Yards-developer Bruce Ratner. “Sometimes you’ve got to work with the enemy to get things done,” Holtz explained, over his second craft beer at The Gate.

a cooperative, but as Holtz also pointed out over his third beer, “You can’t have everything. Where would you put it?”

“But what we will have will far exceed anyone’s expectations,” he insists. For example, the building will hold 60 one-bedroom apartments starting at $1,800, which is far below market price. There will also be 75 two-bedroom apartments starting at $2,500. If you have more than two children, you’re out of luck. There is also a strict no-pets policy. “We don’t want to ruin the hardwood floors,” Holtz said.

The list of amenities is long. Valet stroller service, meditation room, wind-powered electricity, organic juice bar. “We’re really focusing on what we already know matters to Coop members,” Holtz explained, as he moved on to tequila shots.

The building, which is provisionally called the PSFC Palace, is slated to open in summer of 2019.

How to Apply

Not surprisingly the demand for these apartments is through the proverbial solar roof. And the odds of actually getting one are worse than winning the Powerball. Still, Holtz doesn’t want members to be discouraged. Applications are not available online yet but you can pick up a paper copy in the Coop’s entrance lobby, right next to the elevator.

To be eligible you must have more than three children and make no more than $25,000 a year but no less than $300,000. And of course you have to be a Food Coop member in good standing. If you have owed any make-ups within the last 12 months, you do not qualify.

The last thing Holtz said, as he stumbled out of The Gate, was “Wait until you see my penthouse!” ■

“I’m working my way through all 24 draught lines at The Gate,” slurred Joe Holtz.

Helping Members in Need

Besides being locally produced, compostable and vegan, Kompost Kicks helps the Coop community by putting members owing 18 or more makeups back to work. Of our 16,000-plus members, 3,700 are currently sidelined by suspension and of those 2,400 owe more than 18 makeups.

“I was losing the will to try,” said MK, a suspended member who preferred we not use her name because of the 84 makeups she owed. “I would drag myself to the office and beg them to let me shop, but honestly I was ready to give up. That’s when I met Tom.”

Toesend took the flagging member onto his squad and showed her how to fashion the donated rinds into shoes. Soon she was doing 4 or 5 shifts a week! When MK finally became a member in good standing again, she pulled Toesend aside. “I told him I wanted to give back. That’s when we came up with the Two For One plan.”

Every pair of shoes purchased at the Coop—or at the Foot Squad table at the Brooklyn Farmer’s Market—eliminates one makeup owed by a suspended member. “I do it for the look on their faces,” said Marine Bendelle, who was wearing a pair of Kabo-Foots and holding three Avo-

A freshly scooped pair of AvoKiddos in size Haas.

Kiddos in size Haas. “When I see someone who was suspended re-enter the Coop for the first time—it’s just magic. I wouldn’t trade that for the world.”

Backlash

But not everyone is behind the idea. Some Receiving workers are upset about the “shoe scraps” bins squeezed into the receiving room. And the Gazette has received letters accusing the Foot Squad of throwing away avocado pulp and squash flesh. “That is just rubbish,” Toesend said of the accusations. “You can’t just use the peel and throw away the fruit. That is just not done. Not on my watch.” Toesend invites anyone to observe the Foot Squad at work. However, openings for the shift are not available at this time.

What’s Next for Kompost Kicks?

“We are working on Banana-Boots and OrangeYouFast sneakers but we don’t want to grow too fast,” Toesend said. “I’m a cooperative guy and I’m in it for the community.”

Look for the shoes at the end cap on aisle 9. All sales final. ■

Introducing Co-App, the Coop's App!

By Al Dente

Want to check the date of your next shift? Need to know the price of kale this week? What time does the Coop close on Sundays? All these questions can now be easily answered with Co-App, the first smart-phone app that organizes all your Coop information in one place.

A project of the Coop's Technology Committee, the app has been in development since 2008 and will rollout in the fall of 2017. "Every time we wanted to release it," says Alex Marquez, "some new feature became possible and we decided to include it. Plus it takes a really long time to get shit done when you only meet once every four weeks for two and three-quarter hours."

Features include:

- Workslot schedules for the next 10 years.
- Check for suspensions and alerts.
- Swap shifts.
- Update your personal info, such as changes in households.
- Current produce list that lets members know what's in season, and if it's in stock right now.

- Name of the farm where the products come from, including location, size and the names of all the farm workers who helped grow the food.
- Bar code scanner that allows members to scan their intended purchases as they shop.
- "Coop Cam" video feed that shows how crowded the store is and if the lines are crazy long. ■
